2. It must be unequivocally identified. In case of acting through a legal representative, a Tax Identification Number (NIF) and a document accrediting the representative's representation must also be provided.

4. A reply must be provided within one month of receipt of the request. There may be an extension of another two months depending on the complexity and number of requests. In case of such a delay, the reasons will be indicated.
5. The data subject may contact the data protection officer at: dpo@windar-renovables.com, to request information and prior to going to the AEPD and/or Polish Data Protection Agency (Urząd Ochrony Danych Osobowych (UODO)), regarding all matters relating to the processing of their personal data and the exercise of their rights under the GDPR.
6. The data subject shall have the right to file a complaint with the supervisory authority, in the event that his or her request to exercise his or her right has not been complied with, provided that the time limit for the controller to reply has elapsed or in the event that he or she does not agree with the reply received by the Data Controller, providing a copy of the reply in the complaint.

II. Right of access

1. You will be provided with the following information:
 - a. Copy of your personal data subject to processing.
 - b. The purposes of the processing, as well as the categories of personal data to be processed.
 - c. The recipients or categories of recipients to whom your personal data have been or will be disclosed, including, where appropriate, recipients in third parties or international organizations.
 - d. Information on appropriate safeguards regarding the transfer of your data to a third country or an international organization, if applicable.

 - h. The existence of the right to request rectification, erasure or restriction of processing.

III. Right of rectification

1. The right of rectification can be exercised if the personal data included in a processing activity are inaccurate and must be rectified without undue delay by the controller.
2. Taking into account the purposes of the processing, this right may be used to request the completion of personal data that is incomplete, including by means of an additional declaration.
3. You must indicate the processing operation(s) for which you are exercising the right of rectification and the correction to be made. In addition, where necessary, the request must be accompanied by documentation justifying the inaccuracy or incompleteness of the data.

IV. Right to erasure ("right to be forgotten").

1. The right to be forgotten can be exercised when any of the following circumstances apply:

- If the personal data is no longer necessary in relation to the purposes for which it was collected or otherwise processed.
 - If the processing of your personal data has been based on the consent given to the data controller, and the consent is withdrawn, provided that such processing is not based on another legitimate reason.
 - If you have objected to the processing of your personal data by exercising your right to object in the following circumstances.
 - The controller's processing was based on legitimate interest or the performance of a public interest mission, and no other reasons prevailed to legitimize the processing of your data.
 - To have personal data used for direct marketing, including profiling related to such marketing.
 - If the personal data has been unlawfully processed.
 - If the personal data must be erased in order to comply with a legal obligation under Union or Member State law that applies to the controller.
 - If the personal data have been obtained in connection with the provision of information society services referred to in Article 8(1) (conditions applicable to the processing of data of minors in connection with information society services).
2. The GDPR in regulating this right connects it in a certain way with the so-called "right to be forgotten", so that this right of erasure is extended in such a way that the Data Controller who has made personal data public is obliged to instruct data controllers who are processing such personal data to delete any links to them, or copies or replicas of such data.
 3. However, this right is not unlimited, so that it may be feasible not to proceed with the erasure when the processing is necessary for the exercise of freedom of expression and information, for compliance with a legal obligation, for the performance of a task carried out in the public interest or in the exercise of public powers vested in the controller, for reasons of public interest, in the field of public health, for archiving purposes in the public interest, for scientific or historical research purposes or statistical purposes, or for the formulation, exercise or defense of claims.
 4. You must indicate the identification of the processing operation(s) for which you are exercising this right and the circumstances indicated above applicable to your specific case.

V. Right of opposition

1. The right of objection may be exercised to oppose the controller's processing of personal data in the following cases:
 - When they are processed on the basis of a public interest mission or legitimate interest, including profiling, in which case, the data controller shall cease processing the data unless he/she can demonstrate compelling grounds which override the interests, rights and freedoms of the data subject, or for the formulation, exercise or defense of claims.
 - When the purpose of the processing is direct marketing, including also the aforementioned profiling, in which case, once this right is exercised for this purpose, the personal data will no longer be processed for such purposes.
2. You must indicate the identification of the processing operation(s) for which you are exercising this right and the circumstances indicated above applicable to your specific case.
3. Right to limitation of processing
 1. The right to limitation of processing consists of obtaining the limitation of the data processing carried out by the data controller, although its exercise has two aspects:
 - a. You can request the suspension of data processing:
 - When the accuracy of the personal data has been contested, for a period of time that allows the Data Controller to verify it.
 - When the right to object to the processing carried out by the controller on the basis of legitimate interest or public interest mission has been exercised, while the controller verifies whether these reasons prevail over those of the applicant.
 - b. You can ask the person in charge to keep the data:
 - When the processing is illegal and instead of exercising the right to erase data, the right to limit its use is requested.

- When the controller no longer needs personal data for the purposes of the processing, the data subject needs them for formulation, exercise or defense of claims.
2. You must indicate the identification of the processing operation(s) for which you are exercising this right and the circumstances indicated above are applicable to your specific case and the circumstances indicated above are applicable to your specific case.

VI. Right to Portability

1. The right to portability can be exercised to receive personal data from a controller in a structured, commonly used, machine-readable and interoperable format, which allows it to be transmitted to another controller, provided that the processing is legitimate on the basis of consent or in the context of the performance of a contract.
2. However, this right, by its very nature, cannot be applied when the processing is necessary for the performance of a task carried out in the public interest or in the exercise of public powers vested in the controller or in the event of a legal obligation.
3. You must indicate the identification of the processing operation(s) for which you are exercising this right.

VII. Right not to be subjected to automated individual decisions

1. This right ensures that personal data subjects are not subjected to a decision based solely on data processing, including profiling, that may produce legal effects.
2. Profiling is considered to be any form of processing of personal data that evaluates personal aspects that make it possible, in particular, to analyze or predict aspects related to job performance, economic situation, health, personal preferences or interests, reliability or behavior.
3. This right shall not apply when
 - It is necessary for the conclusion or performance of a contract between the data subject and the data controller.
 - The processing of the data is based on the consent previously given.
 - The processing is authorized by Union or Member State law and appropriate measures are provided to safeguard the rights and freedoms and legitimate interests of the data subject.

This is without prejudice to the fact that the data controller must guarantee the right to obtain human intervention, to express the point of view of the data subject and the possibility of challenging the decision. Moreover, the above exceptions do not generally apply to special categories of data.

4. You must indicate the identification of the processing operation(s) for which you are exercising this right.
